Are you pleased with the Clothes you buy?
 Are you sure that they are right?
 Are you getting the best there is?
 Are you paying proper prices?

Pertinent questions these, and worth your while to consider.

The Clothes we sell are of our own make, and can be bought only in our own stores.

They look better, fit better, and are superior in every way to the average ready-made Clothes that are sold even in the better class of stores. Our prices are low.

The new SPRING OVERCOATS are here.

The Pioneer Electrical Journal of America

Read wherever the English Language is spoken.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD is the largest, most handsomely illustrated, and widest circulated electrical journal in the world. It should be read by every student, and, for that matter, by every intelligent American.

The paper is ably edited, and is noted for explaining electrical principles, and describing new inventions and discoveries in simple and easy language, devoid of technicalities.

No one who desires to keep abreast of the wonderful activity in electrical discovery and invention that characterizes our times can afford to miss THE WORLD for a single issue.

Fifty-six to eighty pages a week. Handsomely illustrated. Subscription, including United States, Canadian, or Mexican postage, $3 a year. Of newsdealers, 10 cents a week.

BOOKS ON ELECTRICAL SUBJECTS.

There is no work relating to electricity that we do not either publish or sell. Books promptly mailed to any address, postage prepaid, an receipt of price. Classified Catalogue and information free.

MY AIM is to combine with moderate prices the best materials, most thorough workmanship, and artistic tasteful styles.

If you wish to take REGULAR DAILY EXERCISE, and not be compelled to desist from work because of SORE MUSCLES, you must, after exercising, THOROUGHLY RUB the MUSCLES with POND'S EXTRACT. By its use you are made QUICK and ACTIVE, and ALL SORENESS, STIFFNESS, or SWELLING is prevented, and you will AVOID the DANGER of TAKING COLD on going out after exercising.

We have a book full of testimonials from the most famous athletes; to quote them is superfluous. Almost everyone in training uses it. But don't expect some cheap substitute for POND'S EXTRACT to do what the genuine article will, for you will surely be disappointed. Manufactured only by

CLOTHING and FURNISHING GOODS.

READY MADE AND MADE TO MEASURE.

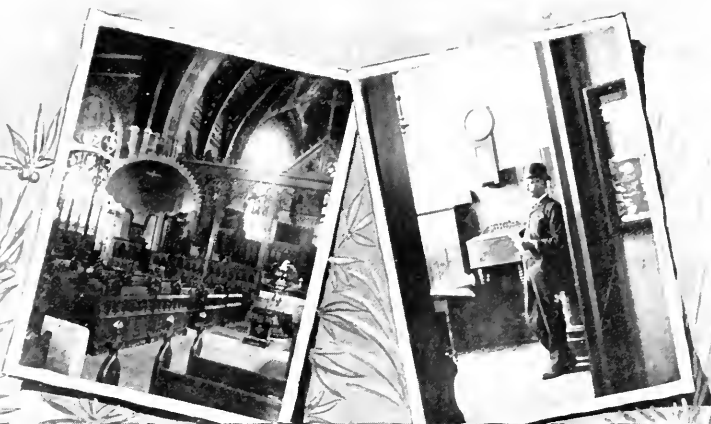

The qualities of our Ready-made garments need no especial mention.

The particular care exercised by us in the cut, manufacture, and novelty of pattern in our Men's Ready-Made Garments is also extended to our Clothing for Boys and Children, and guarantees exclusive styles at no higher prices than are frequently asked for garments made in larger wholesale lots, and of inferior workmanship.

Patterns at all noticeable always limited to small quantities.

Hats for Boys and Youths—Lincoln, Bennet & Co., and other makes. In Furnishing Goods—Allen, Solly & Co.'s Underwear, and the best qualities in all staple articles with novelties in Neckwear, Gloves, Waterproof Coats, Scotch long Hose, etc.

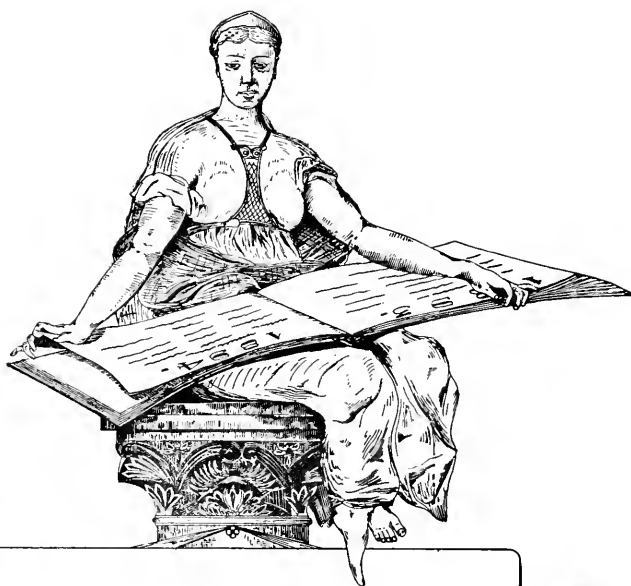

TO THAT
HARDY HERO,

WHO, summoned before the Faculty of Salamanca, and unconditionally “flunked,” despite his conclusive demonstration of the sphericity of the earth by means of an egg, was impelled by a keen sense of humor and a proud sense of injustice to the discovery of a New World,

WHO, while wintering in the West Indies, sent his sons to be educated in the colleges of the U. S., in derision of the decrepitude of the Old World, and

WHO closed his hazardous career in chains for designating Chicago as the most suitable site of the future celebration of his discovery,

TO
CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS,
THE KING OF THE PIRATES AND THE FOE OF ANTIQUATED ASININITY,
THIS BOOK
IS MOST AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED AND DEDICATED.

For the eighteenth time the EPITOME is presented to Lehigh and her friends. Since 1875 it has struggled along bravely, keeping pace with the rapid progress of the University. Long ago it discarded its plain paper cover and gave itself over to the publisher for such handsome covering as the annual of the Lehigh University deserves. Upon the interior we have spared neither labor nor expense.

The experienced reader of college annuals, who remarks the absence of Faculty hits, may see in this departure a silent, though powerful, evidence of our love and veneration for that body. To him we would say that the reading of Rule XXXIII to The Board, in the sanctum sanctorum, has removed us from the unpleasant position of standing "between love and duty."

We hope that the introduction of more literary matter will be gladly welcomed. Such typographical changes have been made, as it is thought will improve THE EPITOME artistically. Otherwise the book remains the same; we have thought it better to follow in the steps of our successful predecessors rather than attempt any radical departure.

Regretfully we close this labor of love for our Alma Mater and turn over to the criticism of the reader the result—the '94 EPITOME.

SENIOR HISTORY.

IT IS with mingled feelings of pleasure and regret that the Historian writes the last record of the doings of the men of 'Ninety-three; pleasure, because the fight is almost over and the reward in view, because through four years a goodly number of our original members have safely breasted the tide of mathematics, languages, laboratories, and drawing rooms; have withstood the ravages of La Grippe and the Absence System, and now stand on the golden shore of graduation. But although we say we are glad to get away, is there any one of us who has not an inward feeling of regret as we say good-bye to classmates and friends, some of whom we will probably never see again, and leave Lehigh, no more to roam about the campus and lie under the trees, no more to loiter on the athletic grounds to watch the practice games, no more to hunt down the Freshman who has borrowed our stools in the drawing rooms, or to attend those joyful class meetings? Yes, we all have that feeling, whether we show it or not.

We arrived here one hundred and seventy-four strong in September, 1889, and were met at the station by the genial coachman from Bishopthorpe and The Springs, who took a few of us to the various places in the suburbs, where we furnished entertainment and refreshments for the Sophomores. For a while we wandered about the streets, strangers in a strange country, and the smiling landlady took us in (badly, in some cases); we were thirsty, and we went to Charlie's; we posted bills, were in jail, and Krauskopf visited us; in fact, these peaceable Dutch people looked after our wants, and administered unto them; they have received good reward in the past, and will surely obtain their just deserts in the future. As we advanced in our college career we gained knowledge and experience; we had dealings with all classes of men that a college holds: loungers, reporters, bores of all descriptions, and chums; and it was not long before we learned the dextrous art of dodging the subscription fiend.

Let us now look over the principal events of the past brilliant career of the Class of '93. Before three weeks of our college life had been passed we had defeated the Sophomores in two or three street rushes, and had had two class photographs taken. But what were these victories compared with the one of October fourth, a day for which every 'Ninety-three man retains a fond remembrance, strengthened by a piece of hickory. It was a beautiful day, one well suited in all respects for the fight which took place on the athletic grounds. True, we outnumbered our opponents, but our science equalled theirs, and the cane was carried over the line and kept there by good management. On Founder's Day we carried canes, introduced our colors and yell to the Lehigh Campus, and then, according to custom, we resigned our well-earned privilege until February 22d. Later that yell was abandoned for the more classic sounds of the present one. We also take pardonable pride in the very successful outcome of our attempt to outwit the Sophomores, and to hold our first banquet. It was held in Allentown, on November 2d, and a glorious affair it was. We kept up our good showing both in studies and athletics, filling several important positions on the teams, supplying the track with good men, and winning the college tug-of-war championship. Towards the end of the year it became the painful duty of the Class to pay its last respects to the memory of John N. Halter, who was called away on May 9th. By his death the Class lost an energetic and promising man.

When we started out as Freshmen we had one object in view—to be Sophomores. When we attained to that dignity, although in numbers we had somewhat decreased, we met the incoming Fresh. with the same energy as we had displayed in treating 'Ninety-two the year before. Schutte crossed the Rubicon with us that year and vowed 'Ninety-three was the best class he had ever been in. The strain was too much for him, and he left soon after. This period also saw the exit of "Pistol" and the advent of "Choppie." We received 'Ninety-four as we had been received, and showed them the country as it had been shown us. There was no annual cane-rush that year, yet 'Ninety-four claim that they won such an event. They base their claim on our non-appearance, but they were very fresh then and probably imagined that the President would excuse the class from an examination in order to cool the ardor of the Freshmen. We offered to meet them in a fair rush on a day when all the men of both classes could take part, but as things stood they ran no risk of having their claim of victory disputed, and they would not listen to any such proposition. The most important event of the Sophomore year was the final stab at Olney. We fought a good fight, came out victorious, and consigned our enemy to the flames of a bon-fire on Shanty Hill.

Now that Olney was out of the way, we began our Junior year by applying ourselves to the fight with Wood and Courtenay, and at the end of the first term they fell before us, while very few of our men suffered from the conflict. During that year we could not boast of great athletic achievements, but in studies, the higher records were far above those of the majority of classes which have passed through the portals of Packer Hall. We did our share towards furnishing men for the various musical associations, and we very creditably kept up the Junior German Club, which descended to us from 'Ninety-two.

We are now on the home stretch, and looking back over the past four years we see a good record, mentally, morally and physically; we have seen many changes in our classmates, in ourselves, and in the College generally. We have seen many changes and additions in the corps of instructors; we have seen the revival of the Engineering Society, the establishment of the Lehigh Quarterly, and of a branch of the Y. M. C. A.; the abolishment of hazing, free tuition, and the beer custom; actual work on a new Physical Laboratory, and prospects of a new observatory. In athletics we have seen Lehigh hold the championship of Pennsylvania in base-ball and foot-ball, and the inter-collegiate championship of the United States in lacrosse. We have seen Jim moving about Packer Hall, carrying petitions to the Faculty, Sunday Chapel slips, pink slips, blue slips, and mixed slips, or lying in wait on Monday mornings for some unfortunate who has been indisposed twenty times.

We have seen the grass on the Campus come and go, the leaves appear and disappear from the trees, under which we have so often stretched ourselves to take a final look at some formula, or to doze a short time before going in to Packer Hall to digest our dinners over the edge of a drawing desk. We have spent many hours of pleasure under those trees, and now for the last time are we there on a platform and arrayed in cap and gown. This is the last Class meeting which we will all attend. We have met here with all cares thrown aside; only goodfellowship and jollity exist as we smoke our pipes, fill our glasses from the punch bowl, and drink to the health of our Alma Mater. The songs and speeches are over and in a short time the men of 'Ninety-three, who have for four long years shared the common vicissitudes of a student's life, will hold Lehigh diplomas in their hands and will go out from this place, from its associations, and the scenes of their theories, into the activity of the world, to put into practice their motto, Per Aspera ad Famam.

JUNIOR HISTORY.

THE history of one class at Lehigh is, perhaps, the history of all classes. The pictures differ in their details, yet the general effect is always the same. There is always the same background: the old town with its inhabitants, to us, people of another world; the University, rich with the memories of four years of work and pleasure. There are the same lights and shadows: the cane rushes, the class banquets, the sports, the studies, the victories, the defeats. But there is one picture that will always appear to us the best; its colors will seem the warmest, its perspective the truest. It is the one that memory brings before us, the story of our own class—'Ninety-four.

The Historian will not dwell upon our achievements as a class. The histories of other years have been told by other pens, and thus far our Junior year has been devoid of incident. It is sufficient to say, that 'Ninety-four has always performed well her college duties. We won our only cane rush—the story of that day will go down among the traditions of Lehigh. Of our bitter battle with "Math." we need hardly speak. It has long since ended, Calculus has been cremated and though, Phoenix like, he has risen from the ashes, he torments us no longer. He that was once our master is now our slave. In the meantime, in the other branches of college life and work, we have not been idle. Five men on the foot-ball team uphold the honor of their class on the field, while our success in the class room is attested by the fact that, though we entered the smallest class in many years, we bid fair to graduate the largest one that ever bid farewell to the ivied walls of Lehigh.

And now we have reached our Junior year. Three-quarters of our college days are past. Three stages on that journey, which lasts from youth well into manhood, have been completed. We have now reached a point from which we can look back and recall with pleasure some of the incidents that happened by the way. How eager we were for the start on that pleasant afternoon in September, three years ago. How merrily did we crowd into the old coach. How full it was: many can not get on at all, while some are merely hanging on to the steps. And now the driver gathers up the reins, he touches up the steeds, we are off. On we go, up hill, down dale, ever onward, for the coach stops but seldom. But alas! the way is rough, the coach jolts and rocks to and fro, and many fall by the wayside. The places change, some who occupied such a precarious position at the start are now secure on top, while others who were in the choice seats have been nearly pushed off. By and by we reach a post-house, rest for a season and start afresh. We fancy that the road is getting smoother. We consider ourselves safe, for the mile-stones of Algebra and Trigonometry have been passed. Some pay no more attention to the necessity of retaining their seats, and think only of the enjoyments of the trip; a false sense of security and fatal to many, for when the next stop has been made another band leaves us to join the first. They must come by the next coach if they wish to complete the journey. But at length the last rough and stony places on the road, those parts that lead to Calculus and Mechanics, have been safely passed. But how few of our original number yet remain with us. Though all along the way we have been picking up stragglers from the preceding stage, there are but half as many passengers as there were at the start. But we now have the consolation of knowing, that those who are on will be with us till the end; for the way is at last becoming smooth and there is but little danger of falling. The fields are green, the flowers bloom by the roadside, never a cloud is in the sky as we rattle gaily on. And we can now enjoy all these, for we have gotten over the excitement of the start and are not yet oppressed by conjectures as to what awaits us at the end. There is yet another post before we must break the ties formed on the road, and take our several ways in the world that we know lies ahead, away off beyond the horizon. We are in the halcyon period of college life — our Junior year.

So let us journey onward, as we have done, until the end. The class spirit and love that has so long held us together is ever strengthening as time speeds on. Another year is yet left before the bond must be broken. Let us enjoy it and use it as best we may. After the diploma comes the battle with the world. We need not fear it, for our Alma Mater girds us for the fray.

—The Soph's Reverse—

SOPHOMORE HISTORY.

TANDING on the lofty pinnacle of Sophomoric magnanimity, I behold around me my illustrious classmates growing in wisdom and knowledge, and comporting themselves in a manner not only becoming to the dignity of Sophomores, but characteristic of the noble Class of 'Ninety-five. Now, there are many things which I might tell of this Sophomoric collection, but space forbids me the privilege. It would be a difficult task to name all their achievements. The most potent of chroniclers would become weary in the attempt, and exclaim, "Thy ways are beyond finding out." And so as historian, I shall not name more than a few, nor shall I attempt to evolve the underlying principles of any.

Taking up the history where my predecessor left off, I find my classmates still climbing the Freshman hill of knowledge, and making preparations for the coming of our enemy—the June exams. But we were not acquainted with the intricate ways of Lehigh, nor were we aware of the difficulties to be overcome. So on they come with all their fury, and many there were who fell victims to their atrocious onslaughts. A few, however, who carried the talisman of 8.5, defied the enemy and passed unharmed. But a large majority finally conquered and came back in September to battle with Analytics, Mechanics, and Calculus, the deadliest foes of them all. The first we have already met, and we are now preparing to attack the other two. And as the year draws to its close, we look forward to showing our appreciation (?) of the latter individual by offering him up as a sacrifice to the profs., to satisfy our dire revenge.

But I would be making a great mistake, were I to forget to mention another enemy who met us last September, however meek and docile they may have been. We encountered them first in a little skirmish on the steps of the chapel, and there we endeavored to impart to them their first lesson in showing deference to their elders, the Sophs. After this little incident we fully realized that we had emerged from the state of Freshmen and had obtained the prerogative of persecutor, and authority of Sophomore.

As the old-time annual cane rush passed out of existence with our Freshman year, we were not permitted to slaughter the innocents. But there were several night rushes—in which 'Ninety-five was not much affrighted by the wild attempts of the Freshmen to hold the cane.

The abolished rush did not, however, leave us without a substitute. Arrangements were made for a series of three games, base-ball, foot-ball, and a tug-of-war. So, on Columbian Day, the two lower classes filled the benches on the athletic field, and awaited with anxiety the results of the contests. Soon the base-ball teams came upon the arena amidst tumultuous cheering. But as the game progressed, Freshman enthusiasm died away, while our spirits became more boisterous. Then loudly did the mountains resound our applause, for we had won by the score of 9-1.

The contests then passed into the hands of the gladiators of the pig-skin, and the battle raged right merrily. It was stubbornly fought, but again our superior training won by the score of 4-0. Then began the final bout. Fifty of the strongest strained their sinews on each end of the crackling rope. And again the eagle of victory perched itself on our banner, for we won from the start. According to one accurate calculator, we gained ground in the direct ratio of the square of the time. Some say the score was 50-0, but as the Freshman anchor was seen dangling at the end of the rope as it passed through the gate, we must give him credit for being in at the finish.

Next to the contests, the most absorbing topic to Freshie and Soph, was the Freshman Class picture; and how they got one, affords perhaps one of the most amusing events of the year. After making some futile attempts to arrange themselves on the steps of one of the buildings for a picture—failure being due to the vigilance of the Sophs—they, one fine day, took themselves off to a desert nook out of creation—or out of South Bethlehem—and there they were “shot off” unmolested. But in a vain endeavor to fool their enemy into believing that it was taken on the library steps, a negative was taken of the latter and a composite made of the two. For a more vivid account of their great stupidity, I would refer the reader to a graphical representation of the evolution of this picture as shown on another page.

One more little incident of these creatures would the scribe record. It was toward the close of last term, after we had waited nigh three months for the Freshmen to get up courage enough to have a class supper, that we quieted their nerves by giving them permission, and further assured them, that they might go without our company. The little fellows showed their appreciation of our consideration of their feelings by almost immediately going up to Allentown and eating and, undoubtedly, drinking to the health of '95. How unlike our Freshman banquet which we held in town in defiance of '94. And in connection with this, need I mention our bacchanalian feast of the present year? The night of February 21 was filled with our buoyant spirits, and ne'er did banquet halls contain a happier and more blithesome crowd.

But here I pause, sorrowfully, to record the death of a classmate and friend beloved by us all. During the Summer the Divine Hand took from our number Frank J. McKenna, who was drowned while bathing at Long Branch.

Here my labors come to an end, and I add but a parting word. Our journey has been fraught with toil and pleasure, satisfaction and misgivings. Although we have not mastered all, we have accomplished much; and now we await with anxiety the decision of fate on those eventful days in June. Let us hope for the best; and although we may not be crowned with success, yet let us remember that

“In the lexicon of youth, which fate reserves
For a bright manhood, there is no such word as fail.”

THE FRESHMAN'S NIGHTMARE.

FRESHMAN HISTORY.

IF this history shall prove interesting to my classmates and their friends, and provoke just a little the slumbering hatred of 'Ninety-five, the historian must be content.

Our college life began under the most auspicious circumstances. As we gathered together on the opening day, each one of us languidly sank down upon the soft, velvety grass. The Sophomores were totally confused, however, when we arose to a man, and hurled them from the entrance of the Chapel, whose services we have since learned to cherish so devotedly.

After the election of our Class officers, the Junior President, in the course of some kind remarks, advised us to be very "circumspect." This sounded like a good word, and that we understood the first part of it, the affrighted Sophomores soon learned by the manner in which we rushed them around several near-by corners.

On the following Saturday evening we had another decidedly interesting encounter with our much-talked-of guardians near the triangle in South Bethlehem. The judges lost their sense of vision in the darkness of the night, and as usual the victory was awarded to the Sophomores.

These few rushes quickly taught us that the Sophs. are like small dogs: "their bark is worse than their bite."

Partly to soothe our wounded feelings, a Bethlehem church, situated a few doors above the New Street Custom House, gave a reception to our Class; the young ladies, attracted no doubt by our intelligent faces, were there in force, and during several weeks following, when not busied in raising 'Ninety-six banners, our men increased their acquaintance with these same charming maidens of the Bethlehems.

About this time the daring of one of our number, in fastening a banner to the flagstaff of the Young Ladies' Seminary, caused (untold) damage, which we were obliged to pay to the Principal, the proceeds furnishing Thanksgiving turkeys to the Bethlehem police force. We can therefore sympathize with the Sophomores for the money which they expended in vain, and the posters which were never read.

We can not agree with the Athletic Committee in deciding that the Cane Spree on Columbian Day was a success. We met the enemy, but we were theirs, especially in the tug-of-war, where our Anchor of Hope was torn from its fastenings, and our men were dragged about by a rope. In foot-ball (0-4) our team did splendidly, but the fates had decreed against them. In base-ball (1-9) the players of our team contended better than the score would indicate. It was learned at the close of this game that several 'Ninety-six players had not been provided with sufficient padding for their gloves, and that the Sophomores had used a stouter bat.

Columbian Day, 1892, will, however, be memorable because on that day the Classes of 'Ninety-five and 'Ninety-six indulged in the first Lehigh Cane Spree, and 'Ninety-six first displayed her colors and gave the Class yell.

After several slight mistakes, which in future years will bear remembrances, pleasant and laughable to our men, but still humiliating and mocking to many of the Sophs., we succeeded in having taken the Class picture, a finer one than which no Freshman Class at Lehigh has ever yet secured. Whatever faults the Sophs. pretend to find in it, all vanish when we consider how crest-fallen they were on learning of its having been taken.

Those Sophomores who so narrowly escaped being shut out from Lehigh's walls, owe their re-instatement to a magnanimous decision on the part of our Class. If the signers of that petition shall fulfill their promises, our Class will have taken for Lehigh the same stand that is now being taken in a majority of the larger colleges of America; a stand which is certainly more manly and less brutal than those encounters in which many former classes engaged.

Last, but not least, of the achievements I have to record, was the Class Supper at Hotel Allen, Allentown, on Tuesday evening, December 6; a supper which was entirely successful, enjoyable, and surprising to the Sophs. An Allentonian, who was roused from his slumbers and had rushed to the window to view the banqueters passing outside, called to a neighbor and remarked in a language peculiar to this region, that it was a jolly crowd, and if taught the virtue of devouring peanuts, would certainly develop into a fine lot of men.

We entered Lehigh a few less in number than our predecessors, but the various organizations have received their full quota of recruits from among us; we have already acquired deep feelings for all that is a part of Lehigh University; our instructors have drilled into our minds, as they doubtless have into every preceding class, the thought that we are the best students who have ever come before them, and we are confident that we will be found wanting in no good qualities during our stay.

Finally, that the Class of 'Ninety-six may be as diligent and successful in their aims and studies, as they were in tearing down 'Ninety-five's banners, is the desire of the

HISTORIAN.

Nothing but bubbles, by Fancy blown are these,
Borne here and there by every shifting breeze.
Yet are the irised pictures on them found
Faithful reflections of the busy world around.
O reader! could we but as well portray
The changing scenes of college day by day,
Rich, full of life these pages would appear,
A true Epitome of the flying year.

RESIGNATION.

There are few men by fortune so befriended,
But some day do despair.
There is no class, however well defended,
But some "flunked out" are there.

The air is full of farewells to the busted,
And sighings for the fled.
The hearts of students with their marks disgusted,
Will not be comforted.

So let us bone hard ere these severe afflictions
On our own heads descend,
That "exams." may come as benedictions,
As the term's work doth end.

THEN AND NOW.

When first I came to Lehigh, and a callow Freshman seemed,
No thoughts had I of failing, and "exams." a snap were deemed,
Visions of "reë's" and flunking ne'er passed before my youthful eyes.
And to my mind a six appeared to be about this size: 6.

But now I am a Junior, three years have swiftly fled,
Fraught with many a joy and sorrow, many a happy hour that's sped.
To my mind has sad experience well its lesson given, I wis;
Now as "exams." approach, to me a six appears like this: 6.

QUEER.

Jack Sporty was a comic cuss,
With jokes he strewed life's path.
Yet he says the best thing he ever got off.
Was that condition he had in "math."

SYNOPSIS.

We have fought the fight, the battle's won, and like the mailed warriors of the olden days, we gather together to celebrate the victory with pageants and music.

Near the Ides of January, 1892, the men of '94 fell into the power of a tyrant, terrible in visage as well as in bodily strength. Who can describe the horrors of the Inquisition, inaugurated and carried on by Calculus? His emissaries, Doolittala, Lamberto and Meacari, were sent broadcast through the land to sorely try and afflict the people. Great formulæ were manufactured wherewith to vex these men of '94. Conflicts were of daily occurrence. Bald-headed-Six's shriek of terror, as he fled on his weary steed before the approach of the eagle-eyed Lamberto, was mingled with the groans of Not-Quite-a-Five and the shouts of mathematical fiends.

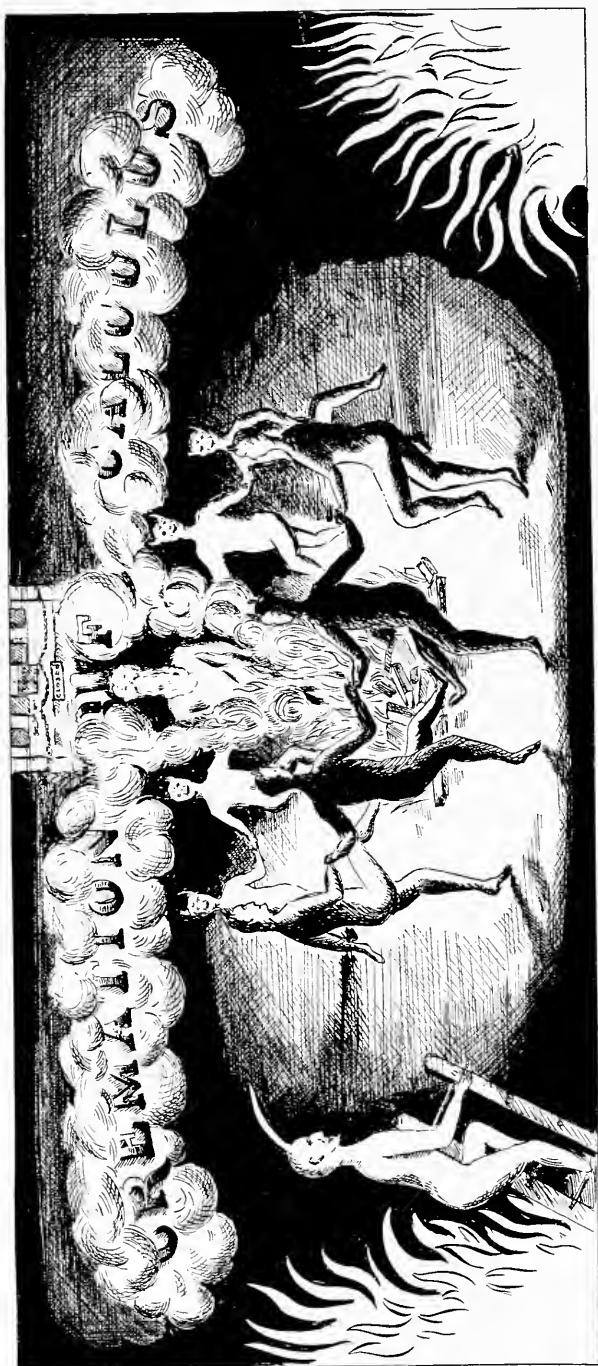

Heavier and heavier waxed the burden; no means were too vile with which to oppress. At last, as light borne out of darkness, rebellion was conceived. At first only a smothered flame, it finally burst into a roaring blaze, and on the 7th of June a pitched battle was fought between '94 and its oppressor.

When the noise of the battle was hushed, the tide of victory had swept '94 over the prostrate bodies of Formulæ A, B, C and D, and though many good men had fallen, yet Calculus was put to flight. Made bold by their victory they pursued the fleeing monster, captured and bound him in chains near the head waters of the Lehigh.

And now they are making their way with their captive to Bethlehem, to the very seat of his recent tyranny. As in the ancient triumphs, the living body of the vanquished foe will be exposed to the view of those over whom he held sway, and then, amid the jubilation of the assembled throng, his body will be burned to ashes and consigned to the river's dark waters.

Float I.—“Advent of Calculus.”

It having been decided that the men of Lehigh suffered not enough, the demon Calculus was invoked. He appears with two attendants and forms a compact with Doolittala, while his terrible presence fills the sons of Lehigh with terror, and they cower in the shadow of their Alma Mater.

Float II.—“Reign of Calculus.”

Calculus is installed in his high position and surveys the sufferings of the students. “Not-Quite-a-Six” grinds away under the supervision of Lamberta, while Doolittala is enough under the spell of the demon to be obliged to arrest somewhat the progress of athletics. The base-ball, foot-ball and lacrosse players tug away, but are held fast.

Float III.—“The Birth of the Uprising.”

A common scene during the tyranny of Calculus. Through despair over their oppression, the men of '94 are driven to dissipation; and in this atmosphere, over their cups, rebellion is first conceived and decided upon as a forlorn hope.

Float IV.—“The Emancipation.”

Having decided to stand the tyranny of Calculus no more, '94 engages him in combat and defeats him. “Degrees” gladly beholds his overthrow, and holds forward the cherished diploma to show that only a little more struggling will be necessary for its possession. The emissaries of Calculus, formulae A, B, C and D, shiver with fear at the defeat of their chief.

Float V.—“Calculus in Chains.”

The monster is brought down the river by his captors and placed on the death-car, to be conducted through the streets in triumph. Choristers chant a dirge that announces his summons to a death in keeping with the cruelties perpetrated by him.

At the River.—“The Cremation.”

Calculus is carried out upon the river and placed upon the float on which is built his funeral pyre. After cremation his ashes are collected and sunk in the waters.

SONGS.

ATR: "Mulligan's Daughter Nell,"

Thy hour is come, O Calculus,
The devil claims his own.
Long hast thy yoke been borne by us
With many a tear and groan.
But now we've conquered thee at last
And we draw an easy breath.
The days of tyranny are past,
We seek thy instant death.

The devil had no better friend
Than thee upon the earth,
He welcomes thee, for in thy end
He sees an angel's birth.
Go serve him well, but haunt us not,
For, as sure as eggs (x) is eggs (x),
We'll make your visit here so hot,
You won't know how to vex.

You've caused us many a sleepless night,
You've wasted midnight oil.
You've dimmed our eyes that once were bright,
In unrewarded toil.
You've made a ghost of an 8.5,
And such has been our fix,
Than nearer dead than half alive
We've fought for a Bald-head-Six.

For thee we now erect a pyre
That for the purpose suits,
For under it we build a fire
Of "boards" and "floors" and "roots,"
To teach McGinty how to diff.
In far infinity
We'll sink your dirty bloomin' stiff
To the bottom of the sea.

AIR: "Old Oaken Bucket,"

Comrades rejoice, who so bravely have striven,
Righteous revenge shall console us to-night;
And when our tribunal its sentence has given,
Finish the tyrant we've crushed in the fight.

Fiend, be prepared for an evening of torment;
Death ends your career ere starlight grows dim.
Master of Math., you expected to drown us;
Now have we conquered, you sink and we swim.

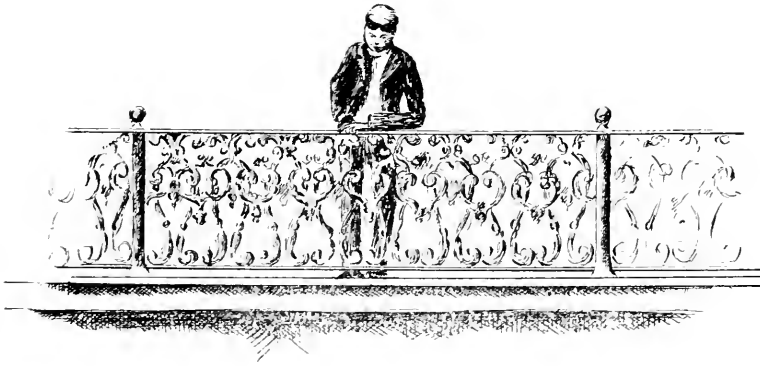

Calculus, bane of the Soph'mores of Lehigh,
Rides heavily shackled to well deserved death.
Songs of our rest take the place of our war-cry,
To-night, midst our revels, he draws his last breath.

AIR: "Flee as a Bird,"

Now, at last thou art vanquished,
Thou who has flunked us so cold,
Long in thy thralldom we've languished,
Though some worked the pony so bold.
Then pray, for thy fate hangeth o'er thee,
Prepare for the doom that is near,
For now we at last have thee vanquished,
Thou who hast taught us to fear.

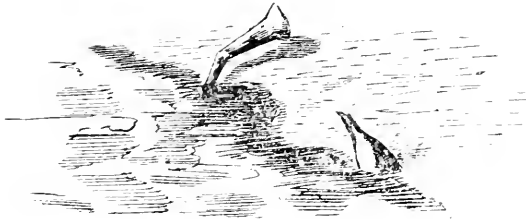

With Bald-headed-Sixes we're cheerful,
And with stately eight-fives some are blest,
And no more will the Junetide be fearful,
For no more you our path will infest.
No more will our classmates be eager,
For the news from the five dollar "re."
No more will our purses be meagre,
From "coming up" with the fee.

Then we'll banish all trouble and sorrow,
From equation and locus we're free,
Lemniscate and witch, ere the morrow,
In ashes and flames we will see.
Let no mercy to Olney be given,
He who has vexed us so sore,
May infinity be past, ere in heaven,
His trials and pains are o'er.

STILL LIFE.

Cremation day is over and past,
The celebration's done at last,
And the memories that haunt our brain
Recall that joyful time again,
Though much of what was done that night,
Eludes our recollection quite.
But still in the Monocacy there lie,
Near the bridge as you pass by,
Witnessing loudly as they can
Of the fun that they lent to some sad man,
All alone in the slush and the wet,
At the water's edge you may see them yet—
All alone there still and forlorn,
A broken bottle and a bent tin horn.

SEVEN AGES OF COLLEGE LIFE.*

A man in college life plays many parts,
His acts being five ages. At first the Prep.,
At Billie's conning hard his dog-eared books,
With ne'er a thought of ponying, and the light
Of youth upon his face. Then the Freshman,
Verdant as the grass, creeping like a snail
Unwillingly to chapel. And next the Soph'more,
Full of strange oaths, bearing with pride a cane,
And seeking the bubble reputation
Upon the foot-ball field. And then the Junior,
Breathing sweet nothings into his lady's ear.
Last scene of all, the lordly Senior,
In cap and gown arrayed, with wise looks
Bespeaking years of wisdom, while he talks
Of former days when he was young, and tells
Old college lore. And then the curtain falls.
That ends this strange, eventful history.

A PARADOX.

This is a proverb true and old,
By ancient seers and wise men told:
"The absent are forgotten."
But not for me does the maxim hold,
Or how account for the manifold
Absences that I've gotten.

A CELEBRATION.

"Mais oh quelle difference dans le matin."

Of course it is a glorious night, and about town we see little knots of men, carrying upon their brows portentous somethings which betoken mighty deeds. These individuals are generally known as students, and are banding themselves together for the very congenial and praiseworthy purpose of a class banquet, which, as every one knows, is one thing above all others that cements still stronger the bonds of good fellowship by a common exhibition of frailties, which only the uninitiated would call barbarisms. The objective point is Allentown, into which they straggle under the burden of their cares, etc. The cue and balls are now in demand, and continue so until the doors of the banquet hall are opened, when they swoop down upon the hospitable board, in nowise respecting the dignified African with side-whiskers. Not many minutes pass before one might reasonably mistake the location for Pandemonium.

Round they go, on they go, anon stopping for the floor to get back to its starting point. The amusements between courses are varied. What between moulding cakes of the viands and exchanging empty glasses for full ones, the time passes pleasantly. Here we see one mischievous youth strike some unsuspecting and groggy member with the soft part of a banana.

Now the toasts are reached. After loud huzzahs, before louder huzzahs, and amid loudest huzzahs they are delivered. The crowd grows more turbulent, more excited, and then frenzied. Articles of the table are hastily concealed for mementos, and amid a whirl of broken hats, torn garments, and yells they surge into the corridor. Here, each trying his best to deserve the name of "sport," outdoes even his neighbor. There is an end to all things, however, and the time for returning is near. But what are those dark forms outside? Evidently this species of phantasmagoria is no new thing to the burgh, and those dark forms are, in common parlance, "cops." The mob comes forth. One youth grows particularly antagonistic to a sign at the doorway and hammers it defiantly with his cane. The dark forms move; the youth's actions are arrested; he is in the American Chancery; a friend puts forth entreating arguments, and he too is engulfed. Two others advance. They are from the far South, and despite their warm Castilian blood, which bespeaks knives and bricks to these scions of the law, they likewise join the band. These four now part from their luckier comrades and are dragged to their cells. Now they begin to realize their fate. With horrible howls and gnashings of teeth they madly rattle the bars which close out Liberty. One shrieks vengeance because of this insult to a foreign citizen, and states that war only can efface the stain. Another likewise tells of his nationality in boisterous yet mournful cadence. Another speaks of his sire's power, and musingly wonders what vengeance will be meet for these tyrants. The last in the line, as he shakes the retaining door, has his martial spirit thoroughly aroused and invokes curses upon those who so deprave the progeny of an army officer. But there is soon a change. A burly policeman appears, and these raving ones sharply cease the disclosure of their pedigrees, and trembling at the Frankenstein their clamors have raised, crawl in their corners to sleep away their excited tendencies until they are released the next morning by sympathetic friends on a bail which "Dutch" justice has made telling.

There is preserved in the archives of the Sophomore Class this little souvenir, which comes from one high in power:

"Dear Sir: In making up my inventory after the quiet little orgie you held at my place last night, I find quite a lot of my property missing, and upon two of the participants we found a big per cent. of the amount short. The tall young gent. with the gray suit, who was taken up stairs in sections, had on his person: one salt-cellar, three knives, one tea-spoon, one table-spoon, one fork, and two wine glasses. The would-be Indian chief, Man-Afraid-of-Nobody, who was trying the bucking act on anyone upon whom he could get a focus, myself included, had with him, when taken up to smoke the pipe of peace, one knife and one fork. And whereas, on this basis of action, the grand summary of shortage and destruction was, with a very close approximation, worth considerably more than I will ask, we will call things square upon the receipt of sixty-three fifty cent pieces.

Yours truly,

H. OSTLERIE.

I. QUEENS, V, 1-29.

1. Now in these days, after that the wars of the canes had ceased, there came youth in great numbers to learn of the wise men.
2. And these youth pitched their tents, and tended their flocks with those that were there, and became of them,
3. Shaming their former gods, and worshiping the gods of the Lehtes.
4. And there were many queens in that land, who ruled each over her tribe; wherefore is this chronicle called the Book of Queens.
5. And the strange youth looked upon the queens and saw that they were fair and gracious, and sought them to pay homage to them.
6. Whereat other youth, mighty in prowess and in deeds of war, were exceeding wroth, and they said :

7. Wherefore come this fresh youth with countenance of brass, and after the manner of children, to do homage to our queens? Let us war upon them, lest they think they are men, and rob us of our favor in the eyes of queens.

8. Whereupon they girded up their loins and prepared for war upon the strange, fresh youth, and would fain have killed them all, but that the captains of tribes of men

9. (Those that were Seniorites and Juniorites)

10. Forbade them, saying, Are not the cane wars ceased? Wherefore do you murmur at the strange youth in time of peace, when the sun shines not on spears and arrows?

11. So they put their shields and swords from them and made not war upon them;

12. Whereat the fresh youths, after the manner of children, waxed brave and mighty in their own eyes, and they said:

13. Let us go to the wise man of the tribe of Frankfurtites, who dwells beyond Jordan, yea even betimes that the Sophites know not of, even in the hour of Calculus.

14. Now the wise man's name was Flickengerzar. And the captain of the fresh youth said unto Flickengerzar:

15. Thy wisdom hath spread afar, even as the winds blow, and we know that thou art mighty in deeds that men know not of.

16. Wherefore, O wise Flickengerzar, hath the tribe of Milkites from the land of the Lehitites sent me,

17. For thy wisdom is known to them, that thou hast a charmed chest, which even as a monster, hast one eye.

18. Wherefore, O Flickengerzar, cause thy chest to cast its eye on our suckling tribe of Milkites.

19. And Flickengerzar did as he was bade.

20. And Flickengerzar and his chest journeyed even unto the land of the Lehitites, and the chest gazed upon the steps of the Temple of Books.

21. And the chest remembered the steps even as it remembered the tribe of Milkites.

22. Now Flickengerzar was of the tribe of Frankfurtites, who drank strange wines of malt and hops after the manner of their kind.

23. And the chest, after the manner of monsters, did also drink.

24. And the wine made much confusion in the bowels of the chest, that it gave up tablets;

25. And the tablets were strange, and Flickengerzar, even the wise man, read not the tablets aright.

26. For many and strange were the things graven on the tablets, so that even the sucklings' feet stood upon air, and their arms were made to stretch forth as wings.

27. And the queens saw the tablets, that there was confusion in them, and they withdrew their favor and laughed the Milkites to scorn.

28. And the Sophites, yea, even all the Lehitites, the wise men, and the Seniorites and Juniorites, laughed the suckling Milkites to scorn.

29. And even to this day are the tablets of Milkites taken for a sign of the foolishness of children, and the mothers and queens of all the Lehitites do deride and scoff at the Milkites.

"THE DEADLY PARALLEL."

1492.

SALAMANCA,
DEC. 22, 1492.

My Indulgent Parent :

Sixteen and a half weeks have swiftly elapsed since I was last enabled to find a trusty messenger faring north toward London to carry tidings of your dutiful heir to you. You know "Magnum pauperies opprobrium jubet quidvis aut facere aut pati," and such has been my deplorable case since basely enticed into a vicious house for the hazarding of money at Madrid. This house is magnificently emblazoned with the Cardinal's device, and the gains secure the conversion of the conquered Moors. You may believe that under these circumstances I have learned "Magnanimiti crucem sustinere." After eluding the determined pursuit of the King's bailiffs, I hastened hither. Here I am embellishing my mens invicta with a superb didactic course on the Justinian Pandects. "Micat inter omnes." That profound jurist, Ximenes Cestarol, has taken us back to the very fountain of all law, the caves of the Troglodytes. But venerable progenitor, such luxuries take money. Is it not Terence who says, "Pecuniæ obediunt omnia." Martial himself says, "Quas dederis, solus semper habebis opes," which means, of course, that the only true recompense is in the pleasing reflection that you have relieved the wants 1892.

LAMBS' CLUB, L. U.,
DEC. 22, 1892.

My dear Pete :

How goes it ? The whole shooting match is feeling rocky today. The lay-out last night was more fun than a goat. It beats me why you don't keep up your end of the horn by being present. You are a busted phenom, as a sport. Johnny's pants don't seem to fit Willie. We'll let you down easy if you'll only take a hand at the blow-out which comes off next week.

His nibs, the governor, blew into town last night on the dead quiet. I had just gotten down to boning, and it took his eye in great shape. He forked over a five and told me to blow myself off to a new tile. A great haul ? Well, I guess ! I never was so dead broke. He is a corker, even if he is my old man and rubs it in occasionally when I get too fly with his rocks. I guess I'll have to soak this money away for a re. in the Fall, as I'm dead sure I flunked my math. on Monday. I'm getting to be an old stager at passing exams. I knocked two this June on bald-headed sixes, although I didn't know beans about the subjects. If I can knock them, tomorrow I will pull through in ausgesight shape, and will be good for another term at least.

The queens are commencing to come in for Commencement. Car-of a fellow creature. Kindly remit by the next Armada. As delicious tokens of the Moorish conquest, we find here many antique families of the Moslem nobility. The daughters are dainty houris of sea-shell and pale sunset types—"O bella—bellissima!" These, as well as the Pandects, involve pecuniary responsibilities. A number of studious dons have spent hours—"O noctes Ambrosianæ!"—with our mandolins beneath the lattice windows where the almond tree woos the zephyrs of the night, and I, the Cid Anglicanus, woo Pepita Caramosa. The tale of a crazy Italian sea rover, who has this year sailed into the black beyond to discover Cathay, is much bruited here. It is commonly reported that he has three invisible black devils ever lashing his back with scorpions' tails, and that, while in Salamanca, the surgical faculty bled him of seven pints of blood, but were unable to restore his mind.

Generous sire, the fleet for the North is in the roads; I have but time to call to your remembrance that if you part not with the Dunderbary wold to Squire Falstaff and remit not to me the fitting share, "le diable," as Charles VII of France said, "le diable serai aux vaches"—the devil will get into the cows.

I have the honor to sign myself,
Your most venerating,
Most recognizant,
Most edified,
Most undissembling,
Most indigent son,
CHIPPERLING TERHEWK.

ter's sister is smooth. Quite a beaut., and I'll rush her for all there's in it after I get through this infernal grind. Imagine such a wart having a nice sister! He is introducing all the chumps in college to her.

Prex. is raising an awful kick about the ponying this term. Three fellows were held up for working their horses last week and fired. The same old racket with the fiends in the drawing room is on again. Those fellows give me a pain. I have worked like a dog but am not a circumstance to some of the others. There are more stabs in the A.C. department than you can shake a stick at. Well, old man, I have a date. Must close. Write soon and copiously to

Yours, in haste,
SAM.

Extract from the correspondence of Sam. Jones, student.

HOUGH some may sing for the pipe a song,
 And its praises tell in verses long,
 Its humble votaries be—
 My heart is set on the cigarette,
 For I with it all woes forget:
 'Tis a solace unto me.

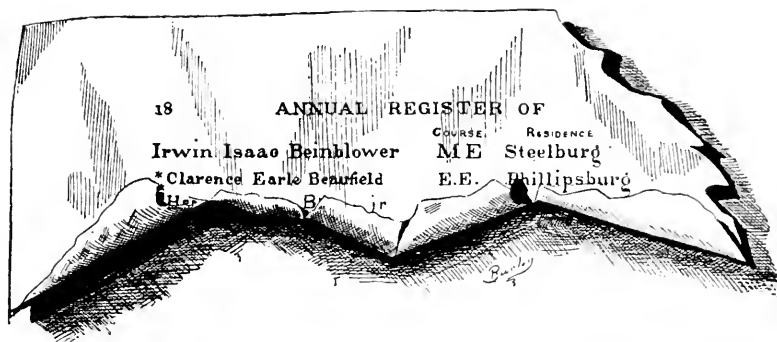

In its dainty wrapper, pure and sweet,
 'Tis a winsome lady, fair, petite,
 Always true to me.
 With a mind serene and a gracious mien,
 Dear to my soul is she, I ween,
 With her I love to be.

Though in it lurks the nicotine,
 Though through the smoke were the death's head seen,
 We'd puff it all the day.
 So we sing our song for the cigarette,
 'Twill banish from us the vain regret,
 It lights our gloomy way.

EARLY INFLUENCE.

In boyhood days an adventurous life he'd led,
 At sea had been, the ship was wrecked 'tis said,
 He drifted in a boat, from hunger almost dead,
 At the mercy of the elements.

In the chemistry "exam." we see him now,
 His mind is drifting helplessly, we trow,
 Ask him the reason, he to you will vow,
 'Tis at the mercy of the elements.

TO A STAR

(IN THE REGISTER).

Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How they'll wonder what you are,
Whether it is French or Math.,
Physics, "Dutch," or Lab., he hath.

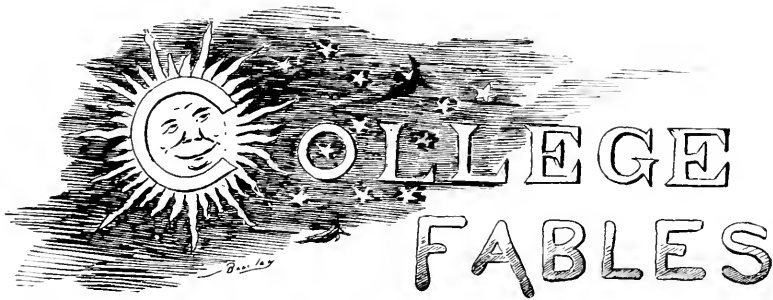

Never will thy rays be spent.
They'll gleam where'er that book is sent,
As the story's told by thee,
Of conditions borne by me.

Then twinkle, twinkle, little star,
Go tell the tidings near and far,
Close beside my name you're placed,
Would that you might be effaced.

HER WINNING WAYS.

Nellie has such winning ways,
They fill me oft with great amaze,
They do my very judgment daze—
Do Nellie's winning ways.

When playing poker with the boys,
Naught could add unto my joys,
'Twere happiness without alloys,
Had I such winning ways.

THE FATE OF THE WICKED COLLEGIAN.

Once upon a time there was a famous Educational Institution which was governed by a Tribunal and an Executive Head. Many gay young men attended it, but The Wicked Collegian was the gayest of them all. No one was slapped so often upon the back, and "Old Man" had become his nickname. But gay college life, like true love, has its rough places. One day The Tribunal sent a notice to The Father, telling him of The Son's neglect of his studies. Then The Father wrote The Son that if he were physically unable to do the work, he would better come home. But The Son resolved to redeem himself, and he arose every morning two hours before breakfast and wrestled with his math. until he was off the Ragged Edge again.

For ten days he had stuck to this resolution. It was a cold wintry morning, and he had just mailed a letter to The Father, telling him how hard he was working. Wrapped in his big overcoat he swung along swiftly.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, as he almost ran over a little waif of a girl endeavoring to carry a basket of mixed fuel.

"Please, sir, help me wid me basket," said The Midget.

He glanced around hurriedly to see if any acquaintances were in sight. Then he picked up the basket with an exclamation about "the kid's infernal nerve," and strode on. The Midget poured into his ears, as she trotted along beside him, the regulation tale of woe. When he stopped she began to sob.

"Confound it all—these things always work on my feelings," he said, impatiently. Then turning to her, he added: "Now, see here, if you will stop that blubbering I'll take the thing home for you."

As they hurried on she dashed the tears away with two dirty little fists.

and made frequent tugs at the ragged stockings that constantly threatened to come down.

When he reached the miserable home he found The Midget's story true. The mother was a consumptive, and they were dragging out a wretched existence alone. For the first time since his childhood the lessons of charity he learned at his mother's feet recurred to him. The theory had seemed very beautiful to a child's generous mind, but the opportunity for practice now afforded was very revolting to a gilded youth. Yet he helped The Midget build the fire. He began to feel out of place and was going to leave when he thought of the bill in his pocket. He had saved this from the general wreck and hoped, by judicious placing on the next foot-ball game, to get even with a few of his creditors.

"She ought to have a physician," he thought, "but I can't stand any more of those infernal absences."

The smoke, issuing through the cracks of the stove, affected the woman's sensitive throat, and he heard her dry cough.

Suddenly, wafted to him upon the chilly air, came the sound of the chapel bell. He hesitated—then ran—but away from college!

This part of the town was unfamiliar to him, and he found a physician's office with much difficulty. The Physician was answering an urgent call, but was expected in at any time. He waited. The clock struck, and he knew he had missed math. He would have rushed out, but The Woman's dry cough was ringing in his ears and the hectic flush was still before his eyes. When The Physician did return The Collegian had cut two recitations and overstepped the Absence Limit.

Medical assistance was of little avail now to The Woman, but The Physician promised to bring her condition to the proper authorities. The Midget, having been supplied with playthings and eatables, became radiantly happy.

"Shall I drive you by the college?" said The Physician as they left.

"No, to my room; I have some packing to do."

* * * *

Next day The Collegian, upon receiving the usual invitation, appeared before The Tribunal.

"Sir," said the Executive Head, "your work was bad, indeed, I may say worthless, for some time. It became our painful duty to inform your father—you improved. But there has been a fatal relapse, sir. You have overstepped Our Limit. Please explain."

The Wicked Collegian gave his explanation hesitatingly.

"Sir," said the Executive Head, rising, "I tell you candidly I do not believe your story."

The Collegian gasped. The Executive Head vanished, and The Scribe With The Rueful Countenance slipped into the trembling hand a "nunc dimittis."

* * * *

Forth from The Great Educational Institution he went with the brand of expulsion upon his brow. When the doors of his own home were closed against him he dared not knock elsewhere. He struggled bravely, but unsuccessfully. He still retained that college vice of sharing with others. He began to look very seedy. Old friends failed to recognize him. One day, however, an old classmate, with whom he had often "ponied," met him and, appreciating his wide experience, secured him a place as Inspector of Intoxicants in a small town.

He could not stand the sunshine of prosperity—he became too faithful to duty. One dark night they found him in the gutter with a broken head. As he lay dying in the hospital he fancied he saw in the shadow of the room two angels.

"I am afraid his chances are rather slim," said The First Angel; "but what do you think of The Woman's petition?" And The Second Angel replied, "It would establish a rather dangerous precedent to allow acts of charity to interfere with The Absence System."

And The Wicked Collegian cursed and died.

THE STORY OF A CANE.

I am a plain-looking cherry cane with the regulation crook handle. For a long time my history was uneventful. With a number of others I stood covered with dust in old Smokseller's window, from which we cast envious glances at the pompous gold and silver-headed canes, and the aristocratic buck horns in their comfortable cases.

One day He came in to have an umbrella mended. In those days He must have been a Sophomore. He carried himself with a jaunty air, and smoked his pipe in the most fascinating manner imaginable. As He sauntered around the shop with his hands in his pockets his gaze fell upon our window. He came closer, and then pointing to me said, carelessly: "Let me see that thing."

He looked at the ferule, struck me sharply upon the floor, and said: "Not handsome, but solid. I guess I'll take it."

Ah! how glad I was to leave the dusty old shop, with its smell of stale tobacco smoke and beer. He hooked me over his arm and we promenaded homeward. What a charming room He had! As He threw me upon the table I noticed that the books there were mostly French novels. The textbooks lay in disordered heaps upon the floor as if thrown there in disgust. On the wall were all kinds of pictures and bric-a-brac dear to young men's hearts. But upon the shelves were photographs of the prettiest girls I had ever seen. All the evening I feasted upon the charms of my new abode. How different from the dirty shop-window! When He returned late that night and turned out the light I was very sorry.

Now there began for me a life I can not well describe. We became great chums, inseparable companions, He and I. Today, decorated with the college banner, I would gladly assist in cheering on the Varsity foot-ball team, tomorrow I would be stretched across the desk in the drawing room, watching him work. This was a tiresome experience, but I did not have to undergo it often. How I used to pity him as I saw the look of despair on his face as he made what he called "a cold flunk." He was ever cheerful; and when math. was too much for him, He would snatch me up and hurry to the theatre, or join in a friendly game of billiards.

Once we went to a class supper together. I stood over in a corner behind a pile of overcoats and could see nothing. Presently I heard them say that it was time for his toast. Yet I did not hear his voice. Then some one said: "He's paralyzed." How frightened I was! But soon I heard him singing, and I knew it was a cruel joke, though his voice sounded harsh and strange.

It must have been along about what these college men call the Junior year that we began to make frequent visits to the same place. Her picture was the one that stood upon his study table. He used to say lots of things as he stood looking at it that I shall not repeat, for they would sound very foolish here. I hated Her, for I was jealous of His affection. From my place in the hall rack I could see them, and I often heard what they said. I noticed that She was very positive in the assignment of certain nights for His calls.

One night they had been talking so low that I could hear but little. There was a suspicious noise, and then She said, softly: "Never anyone else. I swear." I became so excited that I slipped from my place to the floor. The noise startled them, and He came hurriedly out. When He left He forgot to take me with him. As she passed by Her foot struck me.

"Ugh," she said, "He has left that ugly cane behind." How I hated Her.

The next night The Other One came. The college button in The Other One's lapel was different from His. Carelessly she had brought me in with her. I now knew what had happened the night before. Just as She said those same words the bell rang. They did not hear it, but I recognized His step in the hall. He must have noticed The Other One's hat, for He came rudely in. How He surprised them. She poked the fire nervously with me. He saw, as he had seen before, the flushed face, the curl fallen from its place. He understood all.

"Pardon me, I only called—for my cane." He bowed to her, and flashed a withering look at The Other One. Then we went quickly out, and I was very happy. He did not speak until we reached the hotel; then he said, inquiringly: "Manhattan?"

Later on they took him home, but I was left hanging on the railing.

* * * *

Months have passed. It seems years since He "flunked" again and then left, but never a day passes without my thinking of him. The Other One has left his college too, and She—is the proverbial College Widow. I learned this from my friend who stands beside me here in Solomon Levi's shop, for he was The Other One's cane.

A DEAD GAME SPORT.

AN INCIDENT AT THE FAIR.

"Make your game, gentlemen!"

Loud above the asthmatic groans of the band in the grand-stand, above the cries of the fakir, and the shouts and bustle of the excited thousands rang out the shrill cry of the croupier.

Around the roulette wheel were gathered a little knot of men whose bright caps and gaudy blazers plainly proclaimed the student. One among them was our hero, Pete.

Of about the medium height, he had the broad shoulders and deep chest of the athlete. His hair, despite his extreme youth, already slightly tinged with gray, was brushed back from a broad forehead whose thoughtful lines told of hours of honest toil spent with his books. A black moustache, the silky waves of which had enthralled many a fair one, curled defiantly over a firm and decided mouth.

Thoughtfully he watches the wheel spin 'round. From his deep knowledge of the science of probabilities, he knows when to bet. With a mind enriched by years of mathematical research, he has evolved an infallible system of play. He will certainly break the bank.

Suddenly he starts. The time has come. Taking a bill from a well-filled purse he places it upon the wheel, saying with superb sang froid, "Ten dollars on the red."

Around spins the wheel, and again is heard the monotonous call, "Black wins! make your game, gentlemen!"

Our hero's breath came more quickly, but his wonted nerve did not desert him. "'Tis a run on the black," he mutters between his clenched teeth. "Fortune is fickle and only the brave can woo her. Ten dollars on the black!"

Again the wheel goes 'round, and again is the voice of the croupier heard, "Red wins!" He has lost again.

His friends plead with him in vain. "He is a dead game sport and will never quit a loser." He will follow his system.

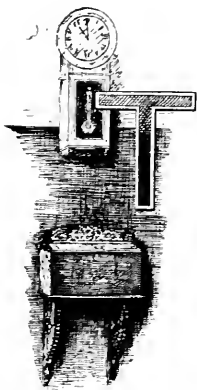

So the play goes on, and just as dusk falls a figure is seen to rush wildly out into the gathering darkness. With widely staring eyes, disheveled hair, and the cold beads of perspiration upon his brow, the confident, bold man of two hours ago could hardly be recognized. He had staked his all—and lost. There seemed no recourse for him except the river.

* * * *

Soon after our hero was met walking up Fourth Street, a sad expression upon his face and a huge bundle of clothes and books upon his arm. He was headed for Levi's. "Yes," he said in a voice that was heavy with accumulated gloom, "I lost, but wasn't I a dead game sport?"

THE LEHIGH MAN.

Oh! the Lehigh man is a merry wight,
Though many a danger his path bedight,
Still he hath never a care.
Oh! he loveth a joke, he loveth a toast,
He loveth a maiden fair,
But he loveth his Alma Mater most,
Of the Brown and White doth he ever boast,
Time ne'er will this love impair.

IF!

HERE is a box in Packer Hall,
Where go petitions great and small,
Pink slips, white slips, one and all;
The absence blanks, oh, how they fall,
Into that box in Packer Hall.

Could that old box a tale relate,
If but the number it could state
Of lies that it has had in freight—
Oh! how would Prexy's eyes dilate,
If that old box could this relate.

A CONSTANT.

A Tangent to an Hyperbola came,
And though he was only a locus,
He fell in love with the lofty dame,
His suit brought to a focus.

But alas! his love had scarcely run
A month, so goes the story,
Ere she a flirtation had begun,
With a Circle Osculatory.

But still his life he doth devote
Unto his heart's divinity,
He follows her an Asymtote,
He'll wed her at Infinity.

CONFESSIONS OF A MATH. FIEND.

"Long years, my boy, have passed, and but a dim memory is left to me of my college days. Most of them were bright and full of sunshine. But, until I am gathered to my fathers, I will possess one horrible heritage of those early days."

And then the old man's head fell forward and his hands dropped softly into his lap. The embers on the hearth crackled feebly and then one by one died out.

"Tell me of it, father." But the man of four score years and more breathed heavily and was asleep. The solemn silence was broken save only by the vagaries of the dreamer's troubled thoughts.

"Aha! not left me yet," and once more an awful stillness reigned supreme.

"Yes, yes, I say! There you are! I see you now, ye shades of Olney, Courtenay, Chauvenet, and the rest. Foul fiends, all of you! How long will ye haunt me? How long, I say? For sixty long years have ye been my torment. That's right! Stick me with your cursed roots, logarithms, differentials, integrations, or whatever ye like. Ugh! That was a painful jab.

"Curses on the day we first met face to face. Can I recall it? Well; as if but yesterday.

"Long after the clock had tolled the midnight hour my lamp sent into the lonely streets its beam of light. So late it was that even Michael Palm had found a sheltering doorway and was fast asleep. Over and over I turned the pages. Wrote and rewrote the long, dreary equations. Why, I can see the way the pages looked. Each seemed more diabolical than the last. And then I blew out my light and sought my couch in darkness; I rolled and tossed and could not sleep.

"When the bell rang in the morning I hid myself with a score of other victims before an old man, whose fame as an expounder of the text had reached beyond the quaintly Dutch limits of the town. I knew not where I was, so dread was I lest he should call my name. And then came in long drawn, sepulchral tones: 'These men may fill the boards.' He called the names. I was overcome by a transport of emotion. Zounds! but that was a terrible moment. Yes, he called my name, but I heard him not. Again he called, but I did not move. Presently he came closer and said, in a voice that seemed to burn into the inmost soul of my being, 'Did you not hear?' I rose, mechanically, and took my place with the other unfortunates. I knew not what I was about. I could not see. The black surface on which I wrote seemed not material. I strove in vain to show whereof I had learned the night before. A chill ran through my frame. My lips were parched, and a cold sweat stood out on my brow. Ye gods! I could endure no longer. Forthwith I rushed madly into the open air. Once there I could not stop. On and on I kept until from sheer exhaustion I paused, saw what I had done, and turned back. But late that night the same lamp shone out into the same empty street, at the same unearthly hour.

"And so the better part of three long years did pass. I was but the shadow of my former self. The blessed Christmas season was at hand. As was the custom, we were brought up for a final trial. I did not close my eyes the night before, but sat buried behind a pile of books and papers, striving after knowledge to carry me through the ordeal. And then the morning came. What agonies we did suffer! The same old man did watch us that had brought terror to our souls on the first day. One, two, three, and four hours passed.

"The long months were at an end. A new life seemed opening up before me. As the feeling came over me that I had passed, a faint smile overspread my features. I laid down my pen. I had unconsciously started to rise from my seat when strains of sweet music met my ears. Nearer and nearer it came. It seemed like the chanting of a Laudamus by some heavenly choir. Then, as if by one instinct moved, we took up the glad refrain, and down the long halls echoed and reëchoed, 'Praise God from Whom all blessings flow.' Out into the chestnut groves, down through the town, and, finally, up to the blue firmament of heaven rose the joyful pæan. All day, all night, and even now, methinks, I hear those happy spirits singing, when I alone am left to tell the story."

A sweet smile flitted across the dreamer's face, and all was still again.

A VISION OF JUDGMENT.

One day a student who this mortal life
Had early quit, and left the strife—
Killed by hard work and earnest toil,
And thirst for fame in this mad turmoil,
Stood at the gates of Paradise and knocked,
And when the frowning portals were unlocked,
He craved admittance.

"Give me your record," the stately keeper said,
"Ere you sharer of these joys are made."

The student answered, "In my college days
I always earned a generous meed of praise
From my professors, for in daily work
My rule was, ne'er the hardest task to shirk.
I never wasted time in idle sport,
But Physics, Math., and German were my forte,
And in my Drawing, Lab. work was, all deemed,
One of those whom students call a fiend.
At this the keeper sadly shook his head,
And pointing downward through the darkness, said,
"It grieves me much to say these realms so fair
Are not for you. You'll find the hot fiends there."

Be wrestlers of renown,
For day by day their time they spend,
In throwing precipitates down.

EDDIE'S LETTER.

My dear Mother :

College life is not what it is cracked up to be. Of course, as you have never been to college, you will have to take my word for it ; but alas, such is the case. You don't sit about in picturesque groups on stone steps, nor lie on the campus all the while, nor do you do lots of equally enjoyable things so eagerly looked forward to before you come to college.

On the contrary, such occupations are the exception and not the rule, as I have found out in my first two months of college life. However, as you have repeatedly asked me for my impression of Lehigh, I will do my best to give you a very impartial idea of the college. Of course, the Sophomores are the most important part of a college, so I begin with them. Most of them wear dirty white caps with a " '95 " on the front to keep them from being taken for Seniors. A great many of them began their career by flunking the trig. re. ; I should say, they failed to pass the reëxamination in trigonometry. After due deliberation the Faculty kindly allowed some of them to be Freshmen over again.

Cane rushes are wrestling matches in a crowd for a big stick. They prove quite interesting. Probably the most fun is to be a Senior or Junior. They stand on the outside of the crowd and push you in again when you pop out for another breath of air. They keep this up until the Seniors and Sophomores say they have taken the cane away from the Freshmen. Then we all go home to brush our hair and adjust our neckties.

The town boys, whom we call " Muckers," are always jealous because they are not in the rush, so they stand back in the shadows and throw bricks and steal our caps. There are also old Muckers, who wear blue suits with brass buttons, and carry hard clubs and pistols. The Bethlehem people call them policemen, and give them a special reward for every student they can get hold of.

I hope you will not object to my becoming chairman of a committee of the Freshman class, which is to provide some entertainment for Commencement week. We have not decided whether we shall honor Bethlehem or South Bethlehem. But, at the same time the Sophomores cremate Calculus, we propose to start a rival cremation ! What would be more proper than a fit sacrifice to our guardian saint, when she will have brought us to the close of our first college year? Of course the custom will perpetuate itself, and 'Ninety-six will stand alone in history, the generator and promoter of a never-ending round of celebration—the cop cremation!

I have not told you that I had again changed boarding houses. Not being of German descent, I do not appreciate sour krout as a delicacy, or even sausage three times a day as a steady article of diet. A most interesting and novel amusement occurs between my table companions and myself at every noonday meal. We bet on the color of the water they bring on in soup plates for us to play with, while they spear the sausages out of the grease in the kettle. Saturdays it runs pink, as a rule, but it was gray last time, and Mondays it is never so bright a yellow as it was once, when they must have put in a two day's dose. I win better on the green than on any other color. It is more exciting than betting on the length of the minister's sermon. I timed that too, and know that if I bet just seventeen and a third minutes I will win eight times out of ten.

In this letter I will not have time to tell you about the laundry that exchanges and mends holes with wrapping twine for a dollar a week, or the queer brick houses standing close to sidewalks, where they can drip water down your neck in Summer when it rains, and in Winter cover you up in snow avalanches.

The sidewalks are also brick and have little ditches in them, where people run out their dish water when you go walking. Perhaps all these faults may be due to the fact that Bethlehem is such an old town, that it hates to depart from the customs of a hundred and fifty years ago; but, in my opinion, another Washington Irving would find ample material for many queer and ridiculous romances in this quaint old town. However, I am young and progressive, and may in my day do something toward some desirable improvements. I tell you, great changes are to be effected in the future. The enlightened state of civilization will begin to have full sway in June, 1896.

Your obedient son,

EDDIE F. RESHMAN.

MY REASON.

'Tis true they tell me that she's seen her day,
A college widow many a time has been,
I know she's getting just a bit passé,
But still I try her best regard to win.

I take her to the concert, at the dance,
Apart from all the rest I love to stray,
Her heart with that old story I'd entrance,
The story that has held the world away.

You wish to know the reason, you'd be told
Why I ever seek her when in the social whirl.
Well, 't is that maids are scarce and custom old
Decrees that a Junior must always have a girl.

A THrice TOLD TALE.

One day one of our Classics, who is a delver in the Library, that treasure-house of ancient lore, unearthed an antiquated Greek manuscript entitled :

ΤΡΙΣ ΕΠΗΜΕΝΑ, ΠΑΛΙΝ ΛΕΓΟΜΕΝΑ,

which, being translated, is, Thrice Told Tales, Told Again.

They are ascribed to Zorooster, a priest at the oracle of Delphi, who used them in his daily talks to the young men whose attendance was required in the "beautiful edifice, one of the noblest in the land."

It is deeply interesting to observe how the idea of these tales has come even down unto our time.

We will content ourselves, however, by quoting one of the most notable and well known.

"It happened that Diogenes, who lay in his tub enjoying his sunshine, saw a young Athenian, with perfumed locks, hurrying by, and seizing his robe, asked : 'Whither hurriest thou?'

'I must away to the banquet of the Epicureans.'

'And then?' queried the philosopher.

'I will partake of the delicious fish of the smiling Mediterranean.'

'And then?'

'I will quaff deeply of the mellow vintage of the sun-kissed slope of Parnassus.'

'And then?'

'I will watch the charming Nydia dance.'

'And then.'

'I will toast my mistress in the dream-laden wines of Babylon.'

'And then?'

'I will list to the sweet strains of the lute.'

'And then?'

'I will cool my palate with a bowl of that which the barbarians of the Tiber name punch.'

'And then?'

'I will drink lustily of the strong waters of the Egyptians.'

'And then?'

'And then,' said the youth, with a glistening eye, 'I will imbibe a Manhattan.'

'And then?'

The youth hung his head, and sadly answered, 'I suppose I will be jagged and can drink no more.'

And he gathered his macintosh around him and hurried off.

And then Diogenes took up his tub and followed him to the banquet hall, weeping salt, salt tears because of his years misspent temperately."

THAT HILL TO PACKER HALL.

YOU may sing to me the glories of the great toboggan slide,

How its ecstasies exhilarate as we down it gaily glide,
Of the many poignant pleasures pure that here are all allied.

But of all the slides I ever slid the slipperiest slide of all

Is the slide we slide n winter up that hill to Packer Hall.

When first as frisky freshmen each one hillward turned his face
And approached the Sophomores snowball armed with a lingering, lifeless
And heard them murmur as we fell, "Ah Freshie, slide a base!" [pace,
Of all our frantic Freshman fears the fearfullest fear of all,
Was to climb in the face of the Sophomores grim that hill to Packer Hall.

And still, when, chapel over, we wend our weary way,
Pondering all the woes which we are doomed to bear that day,
If nothing else can divert our thoughts, when we strike that hill, it may—
And of all our imprecations dire, the direst one of all
We launch at that slushy, slippery hill, when we're due at Packer Hall.

And if I e'er in future years Beelzebub could be,
Devising torments terrible, 't would give me ghoulish glee,
To save for Davy, Courtenay, and our—, hang Rule 33.
Of all my torments torturous, the terriblest of all,
To climb forever in winter up that hill to Packer Hall.

THE DRAMA IN BETHLEHEM.

On Winter nights I love to leave all troubles, toils, and cares,
To spend the night 'mid thespian thoughts and operatic airs.
I hurry to the theatre with expectation all elate,
List to the lines with eager ear and watch with eye dilate.

There I see the mother mourning o'er the deathbed of her child,
The hero fighting for his life in adventures wierd and wild,
And view the villain's stealthy step and strangely subtle smile,
Or hear him tell his plans "aside" in true dramatic style.

Sometimes Uncle Tom and Eva are sent to realms above,
Anon a gray haired ingénue beguiles with words of love.
'Mid plaudits from the gallery is told "Old Ireland's" woe,
Or "'Round the World in Eighty Days" with "The Fast Mail" I go.

But when the sprightly soubrette with "The Bowery" doth bore,
I softly swear, and vow with her that I'll go there no more.
Then, as I hurry from the house a foaming stein to down,
I meekly wish that one new play would come to Bethlehem town.

ANYBODY:

"Of fools the world has such a store,
That he who would not see an ass
Must bide at home and bolt his door,
And break his looking-glass."

SEYFERT, '94:

"Grace of beauty hangs 'round him yet,
Still he is the ladies' pet."

PETRIKIN, '94:

"My hair is gray, but not with years,
Nor grew it white
In a single night,
As men's have grown from sudden fears."

GIBERGA, '95:

"His terrible tale we can't assail,
With truth it quite agrees;
His taste, except for faultless fact,
Amounts to a disease."

FERRIDAY, '94:

"I'm here! I'm there!
I stick my nose everywhere."

REFERRED TO THE COMMITTEE ON STATUS OF STUDENTS:

"Here are a few of the unpleasantest words
That ever blotted paper."

HOUSTON, '95 (at Training Table):

"Silence is the perfectest herald of joy,
I were but little happy, if I could say how much."

- DUNSCOMB, '94 :
 "And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind."
- FARMAN, '95 :
 " So gentle, yet so brisk, so wondrous sweet,
 So fit to prattle at a lady's feet."
- SHEPPARD, '96 :
 " But his tongue ran on, the less
 Of weight it bore, with greater ease."
- GOSS, '95 :
 " He is an adorer of chaste truth."
- KAVANAUGH, '94 :
 " Only one."
- PHILADELPHIA HIGH SCHOOL CROWD :
 " We know it all."
- MR. MEAKER :
 "And thus he bore without abuse
 The grand old name of gentleman."
- YGLESIAS, '95 :
 " Beg a hair of him for memory."
- O'NEILL, '93 :
 " A politician—one that would circumvent the devil."
- RANKIN, '96 :
 " A babe in the house is a well-spring of pleasure."
- C.E. AND E.E. FRESHMAN DRAWING ROOM :
 " Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible."
- HARVEY, '94 :
 " Chaste as the icicle
 That's curded by frost of purest snow,
 And hangs on Dian's temple."
- ATTICKS, '93 :
 " When you have found a day to be idle, be idle for a day."
- HALL, '94 :
 " Barber, barber, shave a pig,
 How many hairs would make a wig."
- MR. MOORE :
 "Glorious things of thee are spoken."
- RE-RE-EXAMINATION DAY :
 " Day of wrath ! that day of mourning."
- MURRAY, '95 :
 " Long, lean, lank and thin,
 As one of Satan's cherubim."

SHRIVER, '96 :
 "A shameless face, and endless gab."

E. C. BROWN, '95 :
 "I am so glad that Jesus loves me."

VAN CLEVE, '93 :
 "Tread on the tail of my coat."

THE LIBRARY :
 "One omnipresent damned eternal noise."

BUEL, '94 :
 "There lies a deal of deviltry beneath his mild exterior."

DE KAY, '96 :
 "Shut up in measureless content."

WEIDEMANN, '95 :
 "It's a pity he could not be hatched o'er again, and hatched different."

SENIOR TO CHAPEL AFTER EASTER :
 "I'll never go there any more."

WARE, '94 :
 "A quiet conscience makes one so serene."

HOPKINS, '95 :
 "Stiff in opinions—always in the wrong."

MITCHELL, '96 :
 "A 'fatted' calf."

DRAKE, '95 :
 "Confound it all, who says I've got bow-legs."

ISAACS :
 "Cheat him, devil, if you can."

SESSER, '96 :
 "A bold, bad man."

OLMSTED, '93 :
 "99 44-100 pure."

VAN BRUNT, '95 :
 "My only books
 Were woman's looks,
 And folly 's all they taught me."

THE BURR :
 "A book is a book, although there's nothing in it."

HARNED, '96 :
 "Myself am hell."

- BROOKS, '95 :
 " His near approach doth turn my stomach sick."
- NEUFELD, '94 :
 "And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
 That one small head could carry all he knew."
- '95 VIGILANCE COMMITTEE :
 "Alack the day ! they come not,
 And our goodly sleep is lost in vain."
- E. B. CLARK, '95 :
 " He wandereth about all night seeking the fairest flowers."
- JACOT, '96 :
 " I lack gall."
- GRAHAM, '93 :
 " His bark is worse than his bite."

 "When the earth grows cold,
 And the stars wax old,
 And the leaves of the judgment book unfold."
- HENRY, '95 :
 "With a voice like a bull."
- FLUNKED :
 " The damned use that word in hell."
- LIVINGSTONE, '96 :
 " I dote on his very absence."
- GIBSON, '95 :
 " All nature wears one universal grin."
- BETHLEHEM JUSTICE :
 " Here judge if hell, with all its power to damn,
 Can add one curse to the foul thing, I am."
- HOLZ, '94 :
 " The over-curious are not over-wise."
- OBERLY, '96 :
 " A man who beggars all description."
- ACTION OF THE FACULTY :
 " Words that burn."
- FRANK, '94 :
 "A little, good-for-nothing, mischief-making monkey."
- DOWNES, '96 :
 "There are some things we can not bear."

- LOWE, '95 :
 " Practiced to lisp and hang the head aside."
- CANE RUSHES :
 " Nothing now is left
 But a majestic memory."
- THATCHER, '95 :
 "A thing of whiskers and of curls."
- WORMAN, '93 :
 " I am too childish, foolish, for this world."
- CONDITIONS :
 " The sad vicissitudes of things."
- KAPPELLA, '95 :
 " I am so fresh, the new blades of grass
 Turn pale with envy as I pass."
- TROUT, '94 :
 " He is a perfect knowledge box,
 An oracle to great and sma'."
- BARRELL, '92 :
 " Chaste, but not severe."
- W. H. BROWN, '95 :
 " Perhaps he'll grow."
- EPITOME BOARD :
 "And art made tongue-tied by authority."
- MR. LAMBERT :
 " Though lost to sight, to memory dear."
- FENNER, '94-'95-'96 :
 " Simply zero."
- DABOLL, '96 :
 " Powder thy radiant hair."
- BRICKER, '95
 " I am not shaped for sportive tricks."
- Y. M. C. A. :
 " Holy! Holy! Holy!"
- SYKES, '94, WARNER, '94 :
 " What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."
- LOVERING, '95 :
 " For who is he, whose lip is but enriched with one appearing hair?"
- LEOPOLD, '93 :
 " Not made to court an amorous looking-glass. "

- POWELL, '96 :
 "Too fresh to keep, too green to eat ; throw it away."
- JONES, '95 :
 "I never knew a man hold vile stuff so dear."
- '96, IN THE REGISTER (not in EPITOME) :
 "Ye go for men."
- '95 :
 "Empty feather heads, growing ever the noisier, in their own emptiness, in each other's noise."
- FAISON, '95 :
 "He lived indignant and complaining."
- HAZEL, '96 :
 "A wise son maketh a glad father."
- SCHOTTE, '93 :
 "As modest as a flower."
- THE PROPOSED GUN CLUB :
 "Gone glimmering through the dream of things that were."
- SCHOMBERG, '94 :
 "Gives me that tired feeling."
- S. BALDWIN, '96 :
 "I am the king's ox."
- NASE, '95 :
 "Sweet as the breath of an odalisque."
- GOW, '96 :
 "Search the thing deeply if, perchance, thou may'st find aught therein."
- NEUBAKER, '94 :
 "The noblest Roman of them all."
- POTTS, '93 :
 "I was not born for great affairs,
 I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers."
- CASTLEMAN, '95 :
 "Hunger hitherward hasteneth fast."
- MILLER, '95 :
 "I am too old to sleep with Pa."
- THE FACULTY :
 "And I would that my tongue could utter
 The thoughts that arise in me."

- MANLEY, '92:
 "See the horse. It is a kind horse. It helps little boys over hard places. Can you ride the horse? I should smile."
- H. H. WRIGHT, '95:
 "All Gaul seems to be at last united."
- BOSSERT, '96:
 "But in the midnight's solemn hush,
 He holds a hand that is not thine,
 He sitteth close beside the wine,
 And dallies with a bobtail flush."
- ROLLER, '94:
 "I give thee six pence? I will see thee damned first."
- ZIMMELE, '95:
 "Grinned horribly; a ghastly grin."
- A. C. MAURICE, '93:
 "A harmless necessary thing."
- BELDEN, '96:
 "What a great boy am I."
- REID, '95:
 "A man after his own heart."
- BETHLEHEM GIRLS:
 "Toys of an hour."
 "Yet still we hug the dear delusion."
- BURNETT, '93:
 "Such goodness in your face doth shine."
- SIGISON, '95:
 "His face is a standing breach of the peace."
- CODY, '95:
 "The length, sir, of your questions will cure deafness."
- LEHIGH'S MOTTO:
 "Many are called, but few are chosen."
- N. BANKS, '93:
 "As fair, as smooth as monumental plaster."
- BIGLER, '95:
 "So young and so untender."
- CARBONNE, '96:
 "Hail, foreign wonder!
 Whom certain these rough shores did never breed."
- E. J. RIGHTS, '95:
 "Not all the pumice of this polished town,
 Can smooth the roughness of the barnyard clown."

J. PHILIPS, '95:

"This Sophomore, hailing from the South,
Is caused much trouble with his mouth;
But one more year in Bethlehem town,
We hope will make him simmer down."

McCLUNG, '94:

"Let me tarry awhile to gaze one moment in the glass."

ATKINS, '93:

"It takes nine tailors to make a man,
So the ninth of a man are you."

COMMENCEMENT BALL:

"In that day seven men shall take hold of a woman."

VAN LIEW, '95:

"A proper man as one shall see in a Summer day."

HESS, '96:

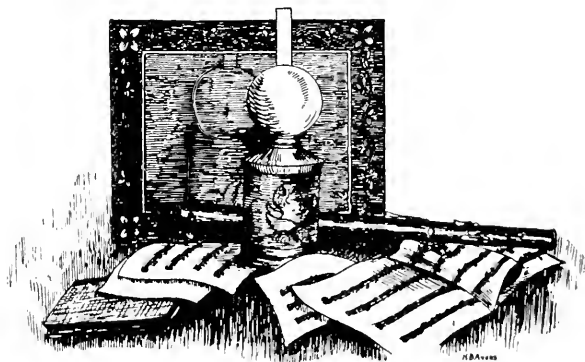

"For gilt-edged, assorted knowledge,
I can discount any college."

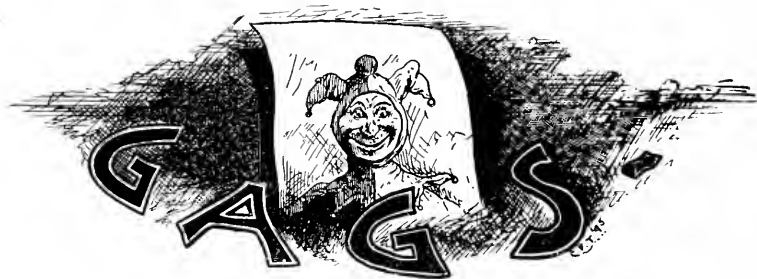

WEBSTER, '95:

"I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river;
For men may come, and men may go,
But I go on forever."

BETHLEHEM COPS, CORNELL FOOT-BALL SCORE, et al.:

"I would some things were dead and hid—
Well dead and buried deep as hell;
And recollection dead as well,
And resurrection—God forbid!"

POST, '95: "What is coke? I never saw any."

PHILIPS, '95 (mischievously handing him bunch of shavings): "Here is some."

POST, '95: "Oh, is that coke?" Proceeds to build fire by putting the coal on the shavings.

JACKSON, '96 (on a visit to the hospital): "Say, old man, have you got a cask on your leg?"

TIDBALL, '96 (hands this slip in at the Library): "Three Guardsmen—Mozart."

WOODEN, '94 (at foot-ball practice): "Well, I can't help it; it's too dark to hear the signals."

HARVEY, '94: "This is a hollow rectangular cylinder."

GADD, '94: "This sphere is suspended by a fine chord."

LANGDON, '94: "Mr. Moore, what is the formula for double concave mirrors?"

WOODEN, '94 (at Harrisburgh ticket office): "Please give me a postal card."

HANBY, '95 (sent from room): "When shall I come to see you, Mr. M—?"

MR. M—: "You will have no difficulty in finding out that, sir."

POWELL, '96: "Ten below zero? Get out; you poured cold water on the thermometer."

MR. DAHLSTROM (after having the method explained to him of fastening armor on a turret, not being much of a mariner, asks): "Is it a smoke stack?"

MICHENER, '95 (in Quantitative Laboratory, pointing to a dessicator): "How do you generate steam in one of those?"

STRATFORD, '94 (reading): "Nous partimes cinq cents." Translating: "We pay five cents."

SEVVERT, '94, while wearily wending his way homeward in a fog, thinks he hears a Moravian trombone. He stops and reverently takes off his hat.

His companion a little later discovers that it is a canalman blowing a conch.

SYKES, '94 (taking hold of a friction clutch): "What a slick governor!"

DR. RINGER to FRANK, '94 (who is reading from a stereotyped edition): "Ah, Meester Frank, why do you not learn your lesson better?"

FRESHMAN: "What will be done with the old Gymnasium when the new Physical Laboratory is finished?"

BARTHOLOMEW, '96: "When is the new Laboratory to be consecrated?"

PETTIT, '94 (in Math.): "Centrobaric means bearing on the centre."

NEUFFER, '94: "The declination of the magnetic needle is caused by cyclones among the sun's spots."

BROMER, '96: "Oh, my! but I do hate conditions. My brother 's at Yale, and he's awful smart, so I don't believe I'll have any conditions."

SWARTZ, '94 (looking at Gym. report): "This man is twenty-five years old. I wonder if that is in the metric system."

MR. L.: "I do not exactly remember the process I gave you for working this problem."

UNDERWOOD, '94 (innocently producing a piece of paper from his pocket): "Here it is. Please give it back before the recitation."

'95 FRESHMAN: "How often does the Quarterly come out?"

OBERLY, '95 (accounting for his low English mark): "My style is so much like Talmage, I believe Mr. F. thinks I copied from him."

UNDERWOOD, '94 (in worried tone to Epitome editor): "Don't publish any rank gags on me that are not true."

'94 MECHANICAL (watching a machine manufacture screws): "Is that a screw machine?"

WORKMAN: "Do you think it's a soda fountain."

HIPKINS, '94, translates "Get off the earth" from quittez vous dans vos terres.

OGDEN, '94 (startled by whistle of speaking-tube behind, and carefully inspecting the vicinity): "There must be rats in that wall. I've heard them several times before."

MR. WILCOX, in Bridges, addresses a question to Buel, '94, but seeing the restful look upon his face, stops and says, loudly: "All out for Bethlehem."

BUEL, '94 (been up late, startled): "Eh! What's that?"

DE WITT, '95 (on being introduced to Instructor Biggin): "Excuse me, but are you '96?"

TARLETON, '95 (in Mechanics): "Professor, I can't see any condition in this problem which makes the spherical shell hollow."

INSTRUCTOR: "Mr. Passano, what is a wheel draught?"

PASSANO, '94 (extemporizing): "Why—er—it's a rotary fan."

GROVERMAN, '95, wishes to know if a mountebank isn't some kind of a wild-cat.

EDEN, '95 (to Mr. Spanutius): "Mr. Spitoonius, I've got a bloody participate 'ere, and I can't tell what the bloody 'ell it is."

DR. COPPÉE: "What effect might the reading of Shakespeare have upon a young man or woman?"

NEUFELD, '94: "It would make gentlemen of them."

RANKIN, '96 (in book store): "Let me see one of those sets of alternating instruments."

GROVERMAN, '95: "In what part of the Bible is the epistle to the Philistines?"

DR. COPPÉE: "What remarkable fact is attached to the death of Shakespeare."

O'HEARN, '94 (evidently seeing a possible solution to the Bacon question): "He died the same day he was born."

O Bennie ! as we watch thee passing near,
And see the winds play wanton with thy beard,
In sooth, our hearts are strangely moved with fear,
And 'tis to us a sight both strange and weird ;
That e'en the elements should take such privilege,
Appears, in truth, a wilful sacrilege.

Pleasurable Exercise.

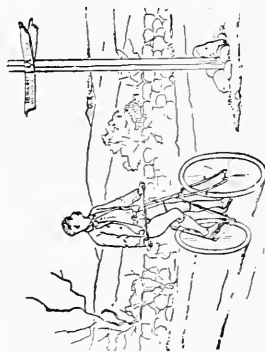

The gymnasium is now universally recognized as a necessary adjunct to a college education. But there comes a time when the weather is too warm and outdoors too inviting to work inside. Then what is better for all-around exercise than the bicycle? It will take you swiftly along the smooth streets of the city or carry you out into the fresh air of the open country. Back again to your study with clear brain and quiet nerves. But your nerves will not be quiet if your bicycle does not run easily, so get a Columbia, for Columbias run easiest, wear longest, and look the best.

Have you ever thought of taking a bicycle tour during vacation?

We have a finely illustrated book about Columbia bicycles. Send to us for one.

Long wheel base.

McIntosh Pneumatic Tire.

Brake-bar runs through head—no rattling.

One of the lightest road wheels made.

Dust-proof pedals.

All bearings dust-proof.

Weight—Roadster 30½ lbs., Racer 25 lbs.

Everything best. The marvel is the price, $120 for a bang-up $150 machine.

All sorts of Sporting Goods are close by.
